MADISON KIEFFER

Alumni Highlight

Madison previously served as the Missouri State President. Madison looks back and realizes that in high school, she did not truly understand the impact that the organization had on her. She is now a third year aerospace science and engineering student at University of California, Davis, as well as a pilot and aircraft mechanic apprentice. She realizes now that she sees values from FBLA in her everyday life, though instead of practicing for competitive events and running conferences, she is applying these skills to everyday work. She urges members to not underestimate the relevance of business knowledge in your everyday life. Madison says that “the communication, teamwork, and decision-making skills I gained through FBLA gave me an advantage navigating new spaces.” We were very lucky to have Madison as part of this team!
